The Anasazi Nation was at the peak of its prosperity when suddenly a shadow was cast over the land. An ominous danger threatened these people and their way of life.

These people who had lived for over seven hundred years in peace and tranquility were wiped from the face of the earth, leaving no trace of what happened to them. All they left were pictographs on sandstone walls to puzzle us and their buildings, which have withstood the times.

How could such a nation of people be eradicated without leaving some clue as to what had happened to them or where they had gone? How could so many people vanish without some sign of violence or natural disaster to mark their disappearance?

In their last fifty summers, one man, an exceptional man, was the only person who seemed to know what was happening to his people. He was counseled by an ancient wise woman who shared his dreams and trained him for his mission. He became the new wise person and rememberer for his people. He traveled the length and breadth of their nation in search of the explanation for his dream. His dream spelled doom for the People and he was determined to find the source of this threat.

Listen to the words of the Wise One, Kaoto, as he tells us what became of his people. Find out what really happened as it was witnessed through the eyes of Kaoto: the bird that runs with the wind.
