SAN FRANCISCO STRUMPET: Spur McCoy's latest assignment landed him right in the middle of brash and bustling San Francisco, hot on the trail of bogus money and genuine Barbary Coast beauties. It soon became apparent that there were as many outlaws in the city as on the Western plains, and even more voluptuous and willing women. Before his mission was done, Spur would be knifed and shot by the counterfeiterers—and shanghaied by some sultry sirens who were experts in the art of sophisticated sin.

BOISE BELLE: The members of the self-proclaimed Citizens' Vigilante Committee were riding roughshod over Boise, brutally murdering anyone in their path, but Governor Martin Evans was their prime target. Called in to stop the five masked bushwhackers, McCoy would get to the bottom of the case quickly—after he got to the bottom of the governor's delectable daughter Lacey. It was five against one, and with six bullets in his gun, Spur had enough to do the job—with one to spare.
