El color, tal como lo percibimos los seres humanos, se halla omnipresente en el mundo en que vivimos, no sólo en la naturaleza sino también, prácticamente, en todos los objetos manufacturados. Este libro examina precisamente los aspectos tecnológicos del color y pretende ser de utilidad no sólo a los estudiantes universitarios de física, óptica y optometría, informática o fotografía, sino también a todos aquellos profesionales que en su trabajo diario tienen que abordar problemas relacionados con el color desde los más diversos puntos de vista. Los temas analizados van desde el tratamiento del color en escáneres y cámaras electrónicas hasta el color en la tecnología de alimentos, pasando por la reproducción del color en monitores, impresoras, fotografía, en la industria química mediante pigmentos y colorantes, etc.
