This is Eat, Pray, Love gone horribly wrong. Under the Tuscan Sun on the dark side.

John Grisham couldn't invent this plot or cast of characters:

Two beautiful young women adore Italy and go there to study.

Only a few months into their Italian dream adventure, one roommate is stabbed to death; the other is sentenced to 26 years for that killing, which the prosecutor claims took place during a drug-fueled orgy involving Knox's rich Italian boyfriend and a young man with a checkered past.

So who killed Meredith Kercher? How did Amanda Knox become the prime suspect? Could she be innocent?

Based in Seattle, Knox's hometown, the award-winning, Italian-American journalist Candace Dempsey unravels the mystery, drawing upon trial transcripts, autopsy photos, crime scene videos, prison diaries, Facebook pages and interviews with the key players for the prosecution and the defense in Perugia, Italy, where she flew often to cover the events up close.

Dempsey covered this sensational case from the very beginning on her true crime blog, hosted by seattle pi.com, featured on Newsweek.com, and read around the world. She has discussed the case on CNN Anderson Cooper 360, CNN Headline News, MSNBC and many other radio and TV shows.
